International Missionary Union,

FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING.

BRIDGETON, NEW-JERSEY, U. S. A., JULY 5-12, 1888.

The International Missionary Union was providentially organized at Niagara Falls, Canada, in the summer of 1884 met there again in 1885, and at Thousand-Islands-park in the River St. Lawrence in 1886 and 1887. It is composed of returned foreign missionaries of all branches of the Evangelical Protestant Church, temporarily or permanently in America. Its international character has thus far embraced representatives of the British Empire and the United States of America, whose flags are consequently the colors of this Union. The constitution names as the object of the Union, to promote the general cause of Missions in all possible ways, chiefly by the diffusion of missionary intelligence, the discussion of missionary topics, and the increasing of mutual acquaintance among missionaries of different Churches and countries.

The Union holds one meeting a year, as near August as possible, on invitation of such community as may proffer entertainment to its members and be easily accessible. The total number of missionaries now enrolled is 134.

In the roll of attendance at the Bridgeton meeting (1888), the names without year of service, are of guests who are not members of the Union.
