Dear Lady: Your letter just came & in the same mail, this with the check. I am therefore sending you a check for twenty dollars. I would send it all, but am afraid I may have overdrawn my account.

Some of us were talking to Dr. Lent just now about rooms for next year. I don't see any apartment to be had and so I have asked for a larger room than the one I have now in order to have room for you with me when you can be. I sort of think for next year, any way, this might be preferable to an apartment. You could be here off and on & not feel that you had to stay so as to make the apartment pay for itself. Then, too, while you were here, you would be free from housekeeping for the time, which might be a welcome relief. Dr. Lent was very cordial and said you could have the guest-room now and maybe we could find a room in this house for you. So I guess we won't bring the bedding and things, and <sup>perhaps</sup> both use this little room. I told Lavin you were coming back after vacation with me.

I can hardly wait to have you here: it will be so lovely for me.

It hardly seems to me that I had better stay at Ellen's this time. I might come back by way of Youngstown and stop both times.

The enclosed letter from Uncle George came this morning — the first I have heard from any of them since I was in N. Y. I have been afraid they were sick. It is good the little family have you for a while, for Auntie had so many burdens with them all the time. I do hope she will get well at Evangelina's — wonder how she happens to be there. I do hope she will stay and give herself a chance to get well. How she does always get the burdens to carry. It is nice and restful at Evangelina's. I'm glad she is there. Did I send you a letter from Mary Cochran to me? This of hers to me is about the things in that letter. With love — Pally.
