

I got the letters for W.
last time
I was sorry it is too late to send them

Trinity Place.

My dear Mrs. Wood Carrie tells me that in a few minutes the postman will be here, so I must hasten to tell you, that I arrived in N.Y. - on time & found Carrie ready to receive me.

I had a very pleasant journey - and felt very well.
Ellis. I found my dress not at all uncomfortable & had no need of a fan, but the way to Plainville, I was seated next a Mrs. Wood from Bristol, we had some little conversation, & when she heard me ask the Conductor how long we had to wait there (for I thought perhaps I could get a fare) she very kindly said she would carry one of my suitcases & help me on the N.Y. train (she was going north). I thought how kindly God was caring for me & wished you both could know so. I felt sorry not to have the assurance that Carrie would meet me, in my but tried to trust in my merciful Father, so that if even she did not meet me I could get along - still, I again began to feel a little anxious - and was glad enough when I saw her dear face, among the crowd. He did some shopping. I got billed a blouse instead of a shirt waist, as they are more worn - and I think they have some advantages over a shirt waist, as the clerk tried to convince

very well. My thoughts were much with the home I had
doing - The dear Carriem seemed so near to me it seemed as if every thing was well with you

Geo. & Carrie had made their plans to go to Exford on Friday so we will all go together, for which I am not sorry. Geo. says he wants very much to go to Bristol where Carrie & C. go too, but as his father is getting old, & on account of his poor eyesight does not go from home, he feels that they must take their boy to there. Carrie does not expect of Ad & J. invitation to go to Texas either.

Very hastily with a heart full of love. Mother.
Carrie sends love. Geo has gone to bus.
