Wednesday

Dear, good kind Cousin Ellen Our poor little boy wrote us such a "heartbroken" letter on Sunday.
Of course I always want him to write Mamma just & tell me all about his precious little self.

He says you are all very kind & I know that is true.

Please just you bring around & let him cry on your dear shoulder for his poor tired Mamma

I think you may comfort

Eddie with the promise that he will do you best & see him by Thanksgiving - I do hope he has not a bad cold both for his own sake & the extra care he must give you - May the Lord bless you for your goodness to my precious, lonely child.

Dear sweet Cousin Elsie:—

Yesterday Mamma
rec'd a most pitiful letter from Eddie, written on Sunday, and evidently when he was very down-hearted and homesick. Very natural it was, I suppose, as it was a rainy, dismal day, Sunday too, and away from home—all of which are very conducive to Nostalgia. I know from experience. Eddie said also that he had a head-ache and a sore throat which would, of course, make him long for his Mother. Mamma wishes me to ask you not to ~~scold~~ ^{reprimand} him for writing as he did. Because she wishes to know just how he feels,

and she is anxious, of course, and especially if he is not well. From Cousin William kind postal rec'd Monday we judge that Eddie has been trying his best to be cheerful and he might not wish to complain about his sore throat. We hope it is nothing serious and we know he will be kindly treated and well cared for in any event.
I am so sorry, dear Cousin Ellen that I didn't get a "goodbye" kiss. In the hurry and excitement I omitted the little courtesy, but tho' the form was lacking phases and assured that the love was there.

Words are but for thanks In all your kindness to me - so I won't attempt them. I hope to write more at length soon - just now however, we are busy bustling about events. I am staying at the hotel with Papa and Mamma as her maid failed to come, and she needs me with her.

M^r Stutch wishes to be very kindly remembered to you and Carrie Melinae and all the family. Love from all here. Always affectionately Carrie.
