CLEVELAND, O. Feb. 23rd, 1904.

My dear Mrs. Belden:

A good typewriter is deemed an essential in an "up-to-date" office equipment, but we have never felt able to supply one for our State Headquarters. Since using one on trial I have realized as never before, how much more efficient service I could render if I could have one always at hand. The expense could be easily met by each Union paying a part of the price of the machine. As I have figured the matter out on the co-operative basis, the burden would not rest heavily on any, and the price of the machine would soon be in hand. So confident have I been that the Unions would respond to this need, I have rented the machine for one month, expecting that at the end of that time I can buy it and pay for it cash down, making my rent money apply on the payment. Will you bring the matter to the attention of your Union, or to your Ex. Com., if that shall seem better, and let me hear the result in the near future? Hoping the work prospers in your hands, I am,

Cordially yours,

Ellen J, Phinney.

I think Oberlin Union's share of the typewriter
should be $3.00
