

to have increased his capacity for love very greatly and he is trying "harder than ever" to be as good as gold because of "our baby."

We all send love and love
so much love,

Dear Evangeline,
Just now I said to Mother that I couldn't write any more thank you's to Evangeline because my vocabulary was already not only tapped to the limit but worn out altogether. And I certainly do mean it. You have showered us with so many dear gifts of all varieties that it has been like a flowing stream.

Thank you ever so much for the "paper dollars" which are such a joy to Carma and Humphrey - much enhanced to the former because he could share with Humphrey. They are very much interested in money and its value and in deciding just what to do with any of their own. I am not sure yet exactly what these two will do. But at any rate they are very keenly interested.

I am waiting impatiently! It is wonderful to see Humphrey's joy-Mabel has been writing some of his remarks to Aunt Mary. It seems
