

Weymouth, Pennsylvania.

My dear Curley, -

I'm just going on a walk to Weymouth about a mile and a half and I guess I'll write you a little note. I thought I hadn't much to say. But the lady says you're the only one that isn't having a visit - and so in these few minutes I'm selecting you to say "hello" to and have you used Paris' soap?

Mamma and Aunt Emily are going to ~~to~~ a luncheon at a neighboring town today. This is the first time Mamma has been out of the house.

She seems very well and is having an easy time for now in her life.

I wish you could come here some time & of course you will some time. It is beautiful. You ought to see how much fuss they all make over their little Boston Terrier. Like many children he is quite the grand of the house. Sara sits with him on her lap at meals and Uncle Pete feeds him in the dining room. The other day he swallowed a great lot of flannel and after that we thought he had swallowed a parcel of letters. It was funny to hear the girls telephoning in Frattini, Bartolo & Angiola's but extraordinary (!) surprise. Florence is continually showing off her photographs to all the people she gets a chance to.

Some of the folks have received one coming to luncheon here today. Well, I must go because I'm afraid Mrs de Charenton will be waiting. Sorry to hear that.

Love from Edwin Greenfield

Mamma is hoping very much that you have succeeded to the back yard. The fact that it has rained here makes her more uneasy about it.

Ellen.

Mamma is anxious to hear if you get through with all the luggage
for the Newells. Is it there any more mail at the post office
to be sent on to us?
