soul was quickened and it was the beginning of a new life. Years have passed then and the history of that woman's life seems scarcely less than marvelous. She is standing alone in her dark village exemplifying the Spirit of Christianity by her life of patient trust in God in the midst of persecutions. A class of unusual interest will graduate this year. It numbers eight. All profess Christ. Most are from Christian families. I have just received letters from them all. And would like to translate some of them were there time, for I think they would interest you with their quaint expressions of trust and affectionate love.

in the midst of the nations of the East—full of the love of liberty and the spirit of independance, what a power she might be for good if controlled by Christian principles. ~~A little band of Pilgrims~~
