

Lady sweet:

Fie's sent the little folding cot up to the store-room. And Fie moved my little low table that I like with my typewriter into the bed-room. This means business, for Fie's going to use it for my "literary work," as you always call it. And I am going to see how much I can get done before the Spring vacation. Aren't you glad?

Later.

This afternoon I went down town and bought a present for Ellie's maid and tomorrow I will mail it to Ellie. She can give it to her from you or from me or from both of us together, whichever you think best. It is a string of beads, the new style, very popular with the college girls. I put them in a nice box I had bought some time ago to use for some gift and did not use. The beads cost thirty-nine cents,

- sale price I think. Any way, I think they are awfully nice for that.

What do you think, Lady? I went down and bought that dress today that I looked at before and am having it fitted. They do the fitting for one dollar and there's lots of work on it. Brownie and Miss Steffa helped me decide about it. It isn't the color any of us would have chosen, being olive green, but it is such a beautiful quality. The clerk said it had been $79 and I am sure it has. I am not going to wear it this spring, but got it to take the place of my black one for next year. It is the same general kind of material and that kind wears so well. I don't want Ma to know I got it & that is why I am not going to wear it at all now. I hope you think I was nice to get it. I paid $20.⁷⁵ including the one dollar for alterations and they are nearly making it over. The shape and material, etc. are very becoming to me. It is a conservative shape that will be in style for ever and the material is wonderful.

Tomorrow morning I think I will go to the Wednesday Morning Club, since I'm a member.

Do you need another night-gown, Lady? I can get that material at the same price now, but in a day or so it will go up again. Please tell me what does Belle think?

I suppose Miss Nash left Georgetown this morning. I wonder when she will call me up.

Everybody asks about you, Lady, and wants to be remembered to you. I miss you awfully and think about you all the time! But soon I shall be seeing you, precious: how glad I shall be? Love you all right, darling?

How long is Pritie going to stay?

This letter takes my love to you all.
Pally.

Lady, do you remember Miss Progen who was in Amy Gilbert's department several years ago? No, I guess you would not remember her - probably you did not know her - for I guess you weren't here that year. She lives down south and every year she sends some flowers to Amy and Brownie. Just now she sent them the larkspur, daisy, and out-door daffodils very different from our kind, smaller and fancier looking. Brownie brought me home and they look perfectly beautiful in one of my brass bowls. I wish you could be enjoying them.

Penny wrote me Cordia had sent you a lovely plant. What kind, I wonder?

Tuesday evening.
