

ADELAIDE T. LOCKE

Saturday morning, May 3, Miss Adelaide T. Locke, who had been for twenty eight years a teacher of Biblical History in Wellesley College, died at her home on Roanoke Road.

A year ago, at about this time, Miss Locke was forced by illness to lay down her work and this last year has been one of suffering bravely borne. The funeral services at her home was held on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. William Sleeper, the former pastor of the Congregational Church in Wellesley, and, a life-long friend of the family, officiating, with the assistance of the present pastor, Rev. Stanley Ross Fisher. The burial on the following day was in Westmoreland, N. H.

During most of Miss Locke's long connection with the college, her home has been in the village and her family has been with her, all identifying themselves with the life of the community and the church. The father died several years ago and his memory is still cherished in the church to whose services he often contributed. There are two surviving sisters, Mrs. Frederick Tucker, whose home is in Baldwinsville in this state, and Miss Minnie Locke of Wellesley. The sympathy of many friends will go out to them and to the aged mother.
