she was here, they seemed to be taking a vacation from duty. I often think of your garden and wonder how it is doing & I often brag of the fine radish we had last year. They certainly were the best I ever tasted. We have all kinds of vegetables and strawberries for cans and

Dearest Teddy,

I know you will be disappointed when you find nothing in this envelope but love I was going to say, but love that is invisible. I do wish I was able to send you some money for a birthday present, but as I have no way of making money I get poorer every day, while I suppose you are laying up some. How much here you in Bank! after all it takes more than money to make us happy Is it - it's a good thing that we do? The consciousness of having done our duty, the love of God in our hearts and feeling and knowing that God is our Father (and what won't a parent do for a child!) I think that He loves us more than an earthly parent, His love fills our hearts with joy unspeakable. Does it not? I wish I could send you a big bouquet of these lovely roses - They are certainly agreeable to the eyes, & the odors who can describe. Aunt Jane often wishes

Grandma I am I believe way one of my P. children will make their mark in the world, altho' I may not be here to see it. Take good care of your dear mother - try to lighten her burdens (I know you do) and believe me always, with best wishes for a long and happy life for you dear young Grandmother

The President was here and I was quite interested the other day when Prof. Lowell told us about a little incident that was gratifying to him. There was a place reserved for the ^{in front of public buildings} different school & see Roosevelt.
He had his school (Colored) all out, every one with a flag to wave as the procession came along - the eager children pressing to the front, the police trying to push them back. The President rose in the carriage but out his arms toward them exclaiming "Let them come Let them come"
They singing Star Spangled Banner I think that was the time.

Our girls here are anxious for vacation, are you studying pretty hard, I suppose you are the head of your classes
