

Dear "Mamma B":— Here I sit by the table in the hall— waiting for you. But lest you do not come I will write this note and leave it for you to read at your leisure.

I have been longing to see you for a little while ever since the night of the lecture and have a little visit. Several things have happened that I wanted you, my Mamma B. to know about. But I can't write them all down for it would take too long so I'll just tell you that my principal errand to-day was to persuade you to go to Mr. Upton's recital to-night, if you felt able. I think it will be good, at least some of it you will enjoy, I hope. You see I expect you to come. I will try and see you there for a few minutes— Della told me she was trying to persuade you to go. Selden & Evalina have come in since I have been here. I enjoyed a few minutes with "The Literary Digest" while warming my feet. There are some good things in it - one Mrs. Lew Wallace's article ~~on~~ ^{about} Education of children. Another "Was Wagner crazy?"

Now I must go back to practice.
It is restful to sit here all alone and think, though it would be restfuller to talk with you. But I am so glad you are out for a breath of fresh air. Isn't it a fine day?

With much love - "Daughter D."

Mrs. Selden
