EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING,

CLIFTON-SPRINGS, N. Y., JUNE 10-17, 1891.

THE INTERNATIONAL MISSIONARY UNION will hold its Eighth Annual Meeting at Clifton Springs, New York, on invitation of Dr. Henry Foster, June 10 to 17, inclusive, 1891.

The purposes in view are, the mutual acquaintance and conference of Missionaries, and the promotion of Foreign Missions both in the hearts of Christians in the home churches, and in the wide field abroad.

All persons of either sex who are or have been Foreign Missionaries in any field or of any Evangelical society, constitute the only membership of the Union, and will be entertained without cost during the week. Provision cannot be made for the children of Missionaries. Missionary candidates under actual appointment will, so far as practicable, be hospitably entertained. Very moderate rates for board in private houses can be obtained by other persons attending.

The sessions of the Union are open to the public; the rights of vote and debate being reserved to the members. The mornings are usually occupied by conferences on technical subjects of Missionary policy and experience; the afternoons by prepared papers and addresses; the evenings by the more popular exhibit of fields.

The programme for 1891 cannot yet be furnished, being dependent to some extent upon late arrivals and conditions of health. The number of well known Missionaries arriving in America this summer, however, gives promise of an unusually interesting Meeting. Drs. Happer, Martin, and Nevius, from China, promise papers or presence. A representative of the Baptist work on the Congo is looked for. The Student-Volunteer-Movement, which began delegated relations with the Union last year, will be heard from, particularly its Cleveland Convention. Important future plans for the usefulness of the Union are to come up this year in connection with the generous invitation of Dr. Foster to Clifton Springs, and of others.

Each year presents some novel features; societies and countries not previously represented, making their appearance. Last year it was the Moravians, United-Presbyterians, Methodist-Protestant Missionaries, Alaska, Australia; in 1889 the Hindoo work in the West Indies, and the Friends' Mission-work, were new-comers.

The Union has been unique in its assemblage, not only of Missionaries from every great field known to American societies, but of those from the diverse connections of more than half the ecclesiastical bodies in the States and from all those of Canada. An example may be taken from the Meeting at Thousand-Islands in 1886. A conference on the Opium traffic was shared by Dr. S. L. Baldwin, Methodist, Caroline H. Daniells, M. D., Baptist, and Dr. A. P. Happer, Presbyterian, all from China; Rev. C. W. Park, A. B. C. F. M., Dr. J. T. Gracey, Methodist, and Dr. Jacob Chamberlain, Reformed (Dutch), all of India.

The roll of the Union has received 225 signatures, and includes representatives of a number of English societies as well as those from Canada and the States. Missionaries find the Union a most helpful and stimulating aid to their work abroad, and its influence upon the Missionary spirit of the home-churches has been shown to be of much value. The central location of the Meeting for 1891 affords a valuable opportunity to Missionaries to promote such an influence.

A library of works by Missionaries, is in charge of the Rev. James Mudge, Clinton, Massachusetts. (See list in Missionary Review for February.) Books can be borrowed by members on payment of postage. Contributions to the library are solicited. Missionaries are especially invited to contribute any publications of their own.

Missionaries are requested to communicate further with the president or secretary, or for Canada with the executive chairman, S. H. Kellogg, D. D., Toronto. Mention of late arriving Missionaries from abroad, will be gladly received.

It is especially desired that topics of interest to the missionary world at home or abroad shall be suggested by mail and at once, to the president.

Should reduced railroad rates be given (inquiry may be had at any principal station), all persons attending, from however near points, are requested to obtain certificates of their trip from the ticket agent at starting point, as railroad-certificates brought to the secretary must reach a certain number to make any of them available.

Missionaries will please notify the president, giving name of field and society or board, with years of appointment and, if retired, of departure from the field. The Union cannot assure entertainment to any persons not so reporting to Dr. Gracey. Any inquiries will be answered by either of the undersigned.

J. T. GRACEY, D. D., PRESIDENT,
Rochester, New York.

WILLIAM H. BELDEN, SECRETARY,
Bristol, Connecticut.
