

From A.E. Pinneo

297 Washington St.
Brookline, Mass

Mrs. E. S. Belden
287 West College St
Oberlin,
Ohio.

and

297 Washington St.
Brookline, Mass.

My dear Mrs. Belden:

My Holed's
Work came just the day after I wrote you and I'm sorry to have troubled you about it.

I am enclosing several seeds of our Histaria vine wondering whether you would like to experiment with them next spring. I don't know where you could find room for any more vines but you will probably find some.

I'm very fond of the Histaria this vine on Edith's house is a very large one, which covers the front porch and

The side of the house and trails all over a tree by the walk. The seed-pods are as neat as watch-cases made of tan-velvet, - we put a few on our bureau and in the night they went off with reports almost as sharp as a pistol shot, and woke us up. I'll send you only seeds, - so you needn't be afraid.

It was just four degrees above zero, here, this morning and I am "toasting" before the register. It snowed 'most all day yesterday and the windows were covered with frost at sunrise contributing to the Christmas-like effect. I love it!

I haven't heard for a long long time anything about Mrs.
Botsford. I hope she isn't very ill.

Wishing you all good things, -

Yours hastily, lovingly,

Annie E. Pinneo.

Dec. 5, 1906.

My dear Miss Evelina:

Just as I had finished my letter to your mother the mail came in and a note from Mrs. Merryman tells me that your Mother has been ill. She just mentions it, supposing of course, that I already knew something of it, but says she is now better.

Mother and I wish to express to you all and to her our sincerest sympathy.

We hope she will recover strength rapidly and surely - and how we do hope that you can secure some efficient help!

I'm more sorry than ever that I wrote anything about the magazine, - you will forgive me, won't you?

We certainly wish you strength and courage and peacefulness and wish we might be near by if we might be of any assistance.

My love to each one,

Yours ever sincerely,

Mar E. Pinner.

297 Washington St.

Brookline, Mass.

Dec. 5, 1906.